SMALLPOX EPIDEMIC IS CHECKED; QUARANTINE RAISED END OF WEEK

Prompt Measures Taken by Health Board Saved City From Spread of Disease at Cost Not to Exceed $1,500—A Former Epidemic Resulted in 128 Cases and an Expenditure Exceeding $20,000—The Two Cases Now in City Practically Cured.

Kingston's incipient smallpox epidemic has been checked by the prompt measures taken by the board of health, and the two smallpox cases in the city will be released from quarantine at the end of the week. The total cost of the present emergency will not exceed $1,500. This is a remarkable record when it is considered that a former smallpox epidemic was allowed to continue for nine months with 128 cases and an expenditure of $20,000 or more.

Dr. Frank A. Johnston, health officer, in making a report on the smallpox situation at the regular monthly meeting of the board of health Tuesday evening, said:

Report was made to this office May 3 of a suspected case of smallpox at 116 Franklin street. Investigation showed that this disease was transmitted by a child named Longyear who had resided in Florida during the winter, and who became sick on the way home. This lad had such a mild attack of smallpox that it was not recognized as such, and on arriving in this city he went to the home of his uncle, George Bush, on April 6.

By reason of the disease not being recognized or reported, this child was not kept under quarantine and the number of contacts before the disease was recognized as smallpox was considerable. After staying at the house of Mr. Bush the boy went to his home at 95 John street, and attended his Sunday school and Public School No. 7 until the outbreak of smallpox in the person of George Bush. Five days later, on May 8, the second case of smallpox was reported, the patient being Mrs. Anna Schryver, in the same house with the Longyear child who brought the disease to Kingston. Although there were a large number of people exposed by the Longyear child, only about 25 were exposed directly in the case of Mr. Bush and reasonably few through the case of Mrs. Schryver.

Immediate strict quarantine measures were at once instituted, the necessary guards placed and measures for the protection of the public were at once taken. All known contacts of each case were vaccinated and plans for constant supervision of those exposed were formulated. All school children of No. 7 and No. 8 Schools where the exposure had been direct were vaccinated or excluded from school for a period of three weeks. The primary department of the Sunday school which the Longyear child attended was closed until the danger of a spread of this disease was past.

It was deemed wise to suggest the vaccination of all children in all public schools at this time and requests were received by the health officer for vaccination of the great majority of the school children of the city. This was not compulsory but was used as a measure of public safety, and with the exception of the parochial schools of St. Peter's Church and the Polish Church on Delaware avenue, practically all the children of grammar school age have been successfully vaccinated without any untoward accidents. Altogether there were 1,931 vaccinations. This is a record which we consider extremely gratifying. In spite of the insidious onset and four weeks leeway given this disease by reason of its being unrecognized, the spread of this infection has been controlled and all cases will be released from quarantine by the end of the present week. A further spread is not anticipated and we believe that the board can be congratulated on the result of their prompt and efficient actions with a minimum expense.

No conditions have ever presented themselves which so justified the presence and activities of a live Board of Health in a community as the crisis through which we have just past. When it is considered that a former epidemic was allowed to continue for a period of nine months and that the total number of cases of smallpox aggregated 128, that the expenditures at that time exceeded $20,000, and that the loss to the merchants reached many more thousands and that the whole city was practically under quarantine from the rest of the state, we believe that the present board can view with pride and satisfaction the work accomplished in the past two months, the results of which are now self-evident and the total cost of which will not exceed $1,500, with no economic loss to the city.

We desire at this time to state that this work depended for its success upon the help and cooperation of the parents of the school children of the city, and we desire to express our appreciation of the help given us not only by the parents but by Superintendent Michael of the Board of Education, Father Cushman of St. Joseph's Parochial School and Father Scully of St. Mary's Parochial School, Pastor Schroeder of the Livingston Street Lutheran Parochial School and the principals and teachers of all the public schools of the city. Through their splendid cooperation the vaccination of all pupils was accomplished systematically and thoroughly with no accidents nor infections. The vaccination was done by officials of the board aided by Dr. Laidlaw of the State Department of Health and Doris Hasbrouck of the Child's Welfare League, to whom many thanks are due.

It would seem that the board would be derelict in its duty if it did not express in some manner its debt to Dr. Frank Laidlaw, state sanitary supervisor of this district, who has worked daily with the officials of this board for the past two months and to whom all credit for the systematic and efficient control in the present crisis is due. He has been untiring, diligent, conscientious and has responded to all requests with an unfailing courtesy, and was most ably assisted by the most efficient health nurse in New York state, Mrs. Mary O'Neil. Lastly we desire to thank the mayor and the members of the board for the opportunity of taking such measures as we saw fit to stamp out this disease, without limiting the expense or means for control which we saw fit to institute, and we believe that the board can point with pride to the work which they were instrumental in carrying out.

At the close of Dr. Johnston's remarks the board decided to send a communication to the state health department appreciative of the work done here by Dr. Laidlaw, who is the state sanitary inspector of this district.

The annual state convention of health officers and nurses will be held in Saratoga Springs June 26-27-28, and the board voted to pay the expenses of Dr. Johnston and Mrs. O'Neil at the convention.

During the month of May there were 51 cases of measles, 2 of diphtheria, 5 of scarlet fever, 1 of typhoid fever, 11 of chickenpox, 7 of whooping cough, and 2 of smallpox.

The reports of the officers of the board, which will be found elsewhere, were read and adopted.

Several routine matters were discussed and the board then adjourned.

Mrs. M. J. Michael presided at the session with Dr. Mary Gage-Day, Dr. Frederick Huhne and Charles L. McBride present. Dr. E. E. Norwood is in California, and Mayor Crane and Frank Kaufman were unable to be present at the meeting.

Schryver has a job in town and was anxious to get back to work.

FORD DITCHED AT STONY HOLLOW

A number of people who viewed the accident on the Stony Hollow hill Tuesday had their attention attracted to a Ford touring car which lay wrecked in the ditch just south of the turn where the accident happened Tuesday. Many were of the opinion that this car was the cause or was involved in the accident Tuesday afternoon. This car was wrecked Monday but how it happened could not be learned. It is reported that the Ford car turned turtle on the hill and came to a stop across the road. It was later removed to the side of the road by state troopers so as not to obstruct traffic. The car bears license plates and at the office of the county clerk this number was issued to Charles E. Ford of Phoenicia. An investigation is being made.

OLD MOVIES UNDER NEW NAMES ARE CONDEMNED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 13.—The federal trade commission took another rap today at motion picture companies which reissued old films under new names.

An order to cease and desist from such practices was issued against the Fox Film Corporation of New York. The commission said the Fox corporation had "furnished to exhibitors three re-issued picture films bearing titles different from those used at the time such pictures were first shown to the public" and that the advertising material in the exploitation of the pictures did not disclose in any way they had previously been shown under another title.

In putting out old films the commission said companies should state in their advertising posters and contracts that the film was re-issued, and that the original name should be given.

FULLER AND M'GEE PLEAD GUILTY TO "BUCKETING"; FACE PRISON SENTENCE

Maximum is Five Years—Customers of Brokerage Concern Lost Over $5,000,000—Bankruptcy Proceedings in Progress and Partners Are in Jail for Contempt of Court.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 13.—Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee, partners in the brokerage company of E. M. Fuller & Company, that failed with a loss of more than $5,000,000 to customers, today pleaded guilty to charges of operating a bucket shop. The plea came when their fourth trial on the charge was called before Judge Charles Nott in the court of general sessions.

The penalty is imprisonment from two and a half to five years.

Fuller and McGee, who are at present in Ludlow street jail for contempt of a court order directing them to produce certain records of their firm, were remanded to custody of the United States marshal and taken back to their cells.

They will be sentenced Friday.

A dozen indictments were brought against the partners of the defunct brokerage firm. The plea involving the bucketing of orders of of guilty was entered to one of these, Franklin Link of Westmoreland, Tenn.

District Attorney Banton recommended that the court accept the plea.

The decision to plead guilty, it is understood, was reached yesterday at a conference between William J. Fallon, counsel for Fuller and McGee, and Banton.

The civil bankruptcy proceedings against the partners are continuing before Harold P. Coffin, federal referee.

Their commitment to jail on the federal contempt order is subject to review only by the appellate court, which does not convene again until October, and until the order is modified or the partners produce the missing records for the receiver in bankruptcy, they will remain in the custody of federal authorities.

RAYMOND POST A RECKLESS DRIVER

Raymond Post of No. 83 Ten-Broeck avenue was placed under arrest Tuesday afternoon by Officer Kuehn charged with reckless driving. Officer Kuehn stated that Post was driving a car, owned by a Mr. Peller, through O'Neil street at 35 miles an hour. Post drove by all street intersections without blowing his horn and with his cut out wide open.

Officer Kuehn informed Judge Schirick that Post had the habit of borrowing Peller's car, with the latter's permission, and driving over in the factory district at noon hour to perform stunts with the car in front of the girls employed in the industrial plants. He had been warned several times to be more careful in driving, but neglected to observe such warnings.

Post, when asked how he pleaded, said he was guilty as charged. He seemed utterly unconcerned.

Judge Schirick fined him $30. Post had been expecting to be let off with a fine of about $10, and later in police headquarters got in touch with friends on the telephone and borrowed the $20 necessary to make up the amount of the fine.

Post is 18 years old.

CHRISTIAN GENERAL OUSTS CHINA'S PRESIDENT AND CONTROLS PEKING

This is Second Time Li Yuan-Hung Has Been Forced From Power by Militarist Faction—Foreign Powers Decline to Intervene in His Behalf.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Peking, June 13.—Withstanding until noon today the military pressure that has been brought to bear to force his resignation, President Li Yuan-Hung this afternoon departed on a special train for Tien-Tsin, accompanied by only the vice minister of war, one other member of his old cabinet, and 30 soldiers as a guard.

His departure was preceded by a strong threat from the Christian general, Feng Jui-Siang, who requested his immediate departure from Peking.

Complete occupation of the city by General Feng's troops is expected at any moment. The city remains quiet.

The flight of President Li Yuan-Hung from Peking marks his second forced abdication as president at the hands of the Chinese military since he succeeded to the presidency in 1916 when President Yuan Shih-Kai died. A few months later Chang Hsun, through a military coup, seized the capital, forced Li to flee to Tien Tsin, and restored the "boy emperor" to the throne. A week later this movement failed but Li remained in retirement until last year when General Wupei Fu after defeating Chang Tso-Lin's effort to seize the capitol proposed a return to "constitutional government."

Li resumed his old office, re-convened the old parliament and set about curbing the militarists. Quickly friction developed and cabinet after cabinet resigned. Finally came the Shantung bandit outrage, the police strike and finally the entrance of General Feng's troops to Peking. Repeatedly Li appealed to foreign diplomats for advice but was told the foreign powers would not interfere in China's domestic affairs.

SAYS HE STRUCK HER WITH FIST

Frank Leo Fitzpatrick, who has been arrested before on a charge of public intoxication, was placed under arrest this morning on a charge of assault in the third degree preferred by Miss Carrie Maines of No. 193 Greenkill avenue, who alleges that on June 9, while on O'Reilly street she met Fitzpatrick who struck her in the face with his fist, knocking her down. Then not contented with that he proceeded to beat her up as she lay on the ground.

Fitzpatrick when arraigned before Judge Schirick in police court said that he had not struck her until she had struck him, and entered a plea of not guilty and asked that the hearing be adjourned. Judge Schirick fixed the date of the hearing June 21, and placed the amount of bail bond at $250, or $100 in cash.

The boys took $600 in cash and jewels from the druggist while the girl drank the bromo seltzer.

DONOVAN ESTATE TO BE MARKETED AS BUILDING LOTS BY VAN WESTRUM

Three New Streets to be Put Through Famous Old Property on Marius Street and "Georgian Court," a Bungalow Colony, to be Created.

The Daniel J. Donovan estate of nine acres, on Marius street and Washington avenue, has been sold to Gerard S. Van Westrum of this city, who will sub-divide and develop the property and within a short time will place it on the market in the form of building lots and bungalow sites. This is the latest and most important real estate development within the city and will provide sites for many new homes.

Three streets will be opened through the tract in accordance with Mr. Van Westrum's development plans. On street will extend from Washington avenue parallel with Marius street, passing in front of the present Donovan home, which when the new street is opened will set back the customary building-line distance from the street. The new street passing the Donovan home will be known as Donovan Place.

The second street will extend from Marius street parallel with Washington avenue, crossing Donovan Place, and will be known as Josephine street, in memory of Mr. Donovan's mother. Josephine street will pass alongside the present Donovan home, which will occupy a commanding position at the corner of the two new streets.

The third street will begin at Marius street some distance beyond Josephine street, and will be known as Eldorado Road. It will take a winding course through the present grove on the Donovan estate, up to the bluff overlooking Washington avenue and the level land bordering on it, and Mr. Van Westrum expects to bestow the name of "Georgian Court" on the bungalow colony which probably will be established in the grove and on the high bluff, for which purpose that part of the estate is admirably adapted.

Georgian Court will possess many natural advantages, which can be easily developed, to make it one of the most attractive parts of the city, and the rock formation will allow of natural stone steps leading up to the top of the bluff from Donovan Place, besides being accessible also from the winding Eldorado road.

All the lots to be laid out on the level tract will have a frontage either on Washington avenue, Marius street, Donovan Place or Josephine street, and will be easily accessible to the Colonial division cars, which run as far as Washington avenue and Marius street. The lots in Georgian Court will be only a few minutes' walk from the trolley.

It is expected that when subdivided in accordance with Mr. Van Westrum's plan, the tract will yield thirty-five building lots. The property is now being surveyed and lots are being laid out and mapped.

The Donovan property for many years has been considered one of the choice tracts of Kingston, and the Donovan home, nestling amid a group of tall trees far back from Washington avenue and Marius street, has attracted much attention. Members of the older generation of Kingstonians will recall the days when the level land in the rear of the present Donovan home was used as a baseball park, which was the scene of many notable games during the early 80's, when the old Leaders was considered one of the foremost aggregation of baseball players in the country, furnishing players to the big league teams who afterward became of national prominence.

For much more than one hundred years the property has been in the ownership and possession of only two families. John E. Masten had owned it for many years prior to his death in 1818. He died intestate and the property descended to his children, John and Eliza Masten, who continued to own it until November, 1865, when they sold it to the late Daniel E. Donovan, who established his fortune as a dealer in bluestone. It is now occupied by his son, Daniel J. Donovan.

More than one-third of the Donovan tract is wooded, sloping upward from the level land which surrounds the home, and terminating on the west in the bluff which will form one of the bounds of Georgian Court. Donovan's grove was a famous place for many years for picnic and excursion parties given by Sunday schools, social and fraternal organizations.

As soon as surveys now in progress are completed and the property properly platted, the development and sale of the property will be begun by Mr. Van Westrum.

And Hancock in Big Tent—Mrs. Shepard and M. Linn Bruce Among Those Who Made Evangelistic Campaign Possible.

A huge gospel tent seating hundreds of people is to be opened under the direction of Evangelist T. LeRoy Muir of Roxbury, at Cadosia, on June 24 for two weeks and at Hancock July 29 for the same length of time. Services will be held every night at which the evangelist will preach and three services on Sunday.

Funds for the tent have been coming in all winter, many churches, societies and individuals being chairholders. Among the donors and interested backers are Mrs. Helen Gould Shepard, the well known philanthropist and Christian leader, and the Hon. M. Linn Bruce, former lieutenant governor of the state. The dedicatory service will be held on June 24 at 2:30 when the Rev. F. E. Van Wie, pastor of the Hancock Presbyterian Church, will make the presentation address.

The music will be under the leadership of Prof. R. E. Kauffman of Dayton, Ohio, a pupil of Homer Rodeheaver and well known in evangelistic circles in the state. A large chorus choir is being organized to lead the singing which will be from Alexander's Conference Hymnal. Milton Muth, the celebrated boy tenor of Union, N. Y., will be the soloist on the Fourth of July.

Then watch it combat the film on teeth

This is to people who are missing benefits which millions now enjoy.

There is a new way of teeth cleaning. It is used by careful people of some 50 nations, largely by dental advice.

It means whiter, prettier teeth, better tooth protection. It means fighting the teeth's enemies more effectively.

Your dealer will give you a ten-day test. Go ask him for it. Test this new method now.

Don't leave that film

You can feel on your teeth a viscous film. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush, used in old ways, has left much of it intact. That's why so many had dingy teeth, decay and other troubles.

Food stains, etc., discolor film. Then it forms cloudy coats. Tartar is based on film. That is why teeth lose luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That was almost universal.

Germs breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. And that became alarmingly common.

Their greatest enemy

Film was the teeth's chief enemy. Very few escaped its harm. So dental science long sought ways to fight it. Eventually two ways were found. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was perfected to apply them twice a day. That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. Now it has come into world-wide use, largely by dental advice.

New in several ways

Pepsodent brings other new effects which research proves essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Old-time tooth pastes brought just opposite effects. They reduced these natural tooth-protecting agents.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific tooth paste based on modern research, free from harmful grit. Now advised by dentists the world over, because of its unique effects.

To millions of homes these new effects are bringing a new dental era—a new conception of what clean teeth mean. If you have not learned those benefits as yet, go now and find them out. To you and yours they mean far more than you will care to miss.

Far prettier teeth
You see them everywhere

Look about you. Note how teeth now glisten—teeth which once were dim. Mark how much those glistening teeth add to beauty and to charm.

Those whiter teeth come from fighting film. And they mean safer teeth as well. This delightful test will show you how to get them.

Present the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects.

One week will bring you new conceptions of what clean teeth mean. Cut out coupon now.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

THE STUDEBAKER LIGHT-SIX SEDAN

Where Quality Counts Above Everything Else

Quality is more important in an enclosed car than in most any other product in daily use.

Regardless of price, it is not economy to buy a makeshift job in which the quality is skimped and cheapened at every turn. Paint, imitation leather and fibre board too often cover serious structural defects and cotton-and-wool trimming cloths are short lived. The chances are that the buyer will more than pay the difference later—in higher upkeep cost, frequent repairs and excessive depreciation.

The price of the Light-Six Sedan is the lowest at which it is possible to obtain a substantial, high grade hardwood and steel body, upholstered in mohair, in combination with a chassis of proved dependability and performance.

Studebaker's South Bend plants build more high quality closed bodies than those of any other automobile manufacturer and consequently overhead costs are reduced and the price to the customer is low.

The in-built quality of the Light-Six Sedan is evident the moment one gets behind the wheel, and is appreciated far more after twenty-five or thirty thousand miles of service.

The Light-Six Sedan, with its sturdy four-door body, its improved L-head motor, and the excellence of its chassis, combines distinction of appearance with a reliability of performance, a degree of comfort and economy of operation unknown in any other car at anywhere near its price.

Power in surplus measure to satisfy the most exacting owner

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

AN EXPLANATION FROM M'NALLY

Relative to the Game Played Between the Studebaker team and the Gardiner Nine Last Sunday.

Editor, The Freeman:

I gave no orders to Red Wagner to dress, as has been reported. He could not be found in the eighth inning.

Following a communication by telephone last evening a return game between my team and Gardiner has been booked for August 26, both teams being busy up until that time.

The game was lost last Sunday by a few acrobats, who were developed in the eighth inning.

The umpires of the contest went by what the fans said and not by their own decisions.

Manager Wells showed poor sportsmanship when he took the ball away from Tierney when he was warming up in the eighth inning.

With nine men on the field it was impossible for my team to win against the other team and the two umpires.

Under my guidance and counsel the Studebaker baseball contingent have been always staunch adherents of true sportsmanship and have always been a good attraction wherever they played.

THEIR ANNUAL DAY OF JOY

Members of the Henpecked Club, of Yorkshire, England, Gather Annually for Mutual Commiseration.

Members of the famous Yorkshire organization known as the Henpecked club held their annual meeting recently at an isolated village on the moor edge five miles out of Halifax.

It is a pretty retreat to which the president has called his "comrades of the apron strings," and, provided the members are loyal to their secret membership pledge, there is not much likelihood of any information reaching the henpeckers in time for the latter to disturb the happiness of the proceedings.

Adam is claimed as having been the founder of the Henpecked club, and today's gathering is officially described as the 5,902d annual meeting. Year after year new members are enrolled, but applicants have to pass a severe test before being admitted. Absolute proof has to be given that for every day in the year, except Easter Monday, they will obey orders issued by their wives and attend to domestic drudgery.

If any man from the West Riding was seen slinking away from his native hearth and going towards Halifax moors he may reasonably be looked upon as a henpecked husband off for his annual outing. A sure sign was his radiant smile and don't-care-a-hang pit.

Famous Castle Crumbling.

The Wartburg, an ancient castle in Eisenach, Germany, where Martin Luther translated the Bible, is threatened with decay, writes a correspondent to the Westminster Gazette.

Two belfries, that have offered many thousands of visitors a charming picture of the wood-covered hills, are to be closed, as the stairs are rotting. Even the renowned nook where the reformer carried out his task and composed his songs is in a wretched state of disrepair.

Splendid frescoes in the galleries and the roof of the big hall are crumbling. Old warders who, for more than forty years, have devoted every attention to the Wartburg, are leaving owing to a lack of funds necessary for its preservation.

"The Wartburg does not belong to Germany alone," states Doctor Demmer in an appeal. "It belongs to the whole world of culture and religion. Give us money to keep our sanctuary, for you, for us, and for the world."

To Preserve Famous Home.

The home of Annie Laurie, Craigdarroch, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, where she lived after marriage, is to be sold. Mrs. Fergusson survived her husband, and the present mansion house of Craigdarroch was largely built under her directions. She died in 1761 at the age of seventy-nine. At Craigdarroch there has been carefully treasured for more than a century, "The Whistle," a drinking trophy which inspired Robert Burns' ballad of that name. It is made of wood and was brought from Denmark by a Dane of gigantic stature, who went to Scotland in the train of Queen Anne of Denmark. At the commencement of his orgies he laid the Whistle on the table, and whoever was last able to blow it was to carry it off as trophy of victory.

Riches in Philippines.

Diamond drilling has proved there are at least 3,000,000 tons of semi-anthracite, besides large deposits of subbituminous coal, in the Philippine Islands, Dr. Warren D. Smith, head geologist of the University of Oregon and authority on the mineral wealth of our antipodal possession, declared recently. The islands also possess the largest gold mine in that Far East, which has turned out $1,000,000 worth of the precious metal in one year, he said. Petroleum, iron, silver, sulphur and asbestos are also found.

Ancient Alarm Like Factory Whistle.

H. Diels, following a suggestion derived from the musician Aristocles, as quoted by Athenaeus, has presented a reconstruction of the alarm devised by Plato to wake the students of the academy, reports the Scientific American. A quantity of water suddenly released from an upper receptacle fills a lower, forcing the air in the latter through a pipe and so producing a sound which was an ancient anticipation of the modern factory whistle.

WOMAN'S BODY IN LAKE; APPARENTLY MURDER VICTIM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Gary, Ind., June 13.—Badly mutilated, the body of a woman about 35 years old was taken from the lake near here early today. The body was well dressed but neither coat nor hat was found. Labels in her shoes showed them to have been purchased from "Fyfer, Detroit, Michigan." She wore a plain gold wedding ring and a small silver ring.

Hasty examination showed all teeth knocked out, the face discolored by bruises, and it was said there were evidences of a skull fracture. Police expressed the belief the woman was murdered and thrown into the lake.

Ulster Park Ladies' Aid.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Ulster Park will hold its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Henry Osborn Friday, June 15.

Soap for Window Sashes.

Window sashes will run smoothly and without any noise if the inner part of the frame is well rubbed with a dry cake of soap. The same treatment ensures the free movement of drawers which often do not slide in and out readily. Furniture in rooms that are covered with linoleum often makes a good deal of noise when it is moved about. All this can be avoided by gluing discs of felt or rubber, cut from an old hot water bottle, on the bottom of the legs or by attaching silencers bought ready-made.

Pelican Was Too Greedy.

On the River Murray, Australia, where the water shallows near the shore, a pelican was seen to seize a swimming snake, apparently thinking that it was a fish. It clutched the snake in its huge beak and dragged it ashore, though it was five feet long. There it swallowed it. When the fisherman who witnessed the feat looked at the bird again it was lying dead, and the snake could not be seen, but a hole in the bird's crop showed how the reptile had made its escape.

Language of the Sea.

It might be thought that the word admiral is a typical English expression. Its origin, however, is Emir el Bagh, which is Arabic for "Lord of the sea." The term captain comes to us direct from the Latin caput, meaning head. The coxswain was originally the man who pulled the after-oar of the captain's boat, then known as the "cock's boat." Cock-boat itself is a corruption of the word coracle, a small round boat used for fishing. Commodore is nothing more than the Italian Commendatore, or commander.

Victorian Flavor in Bridal Array

Nuptial Events Bring Out the Best and Newest Wearing Apparel.

The bride and her attendants are the chief purveyors of fashionable dress—especially in springtime, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. At this season of the year we cannot help but look to the clothes of the wedding party for an indication of smart styles, for at such functions are gathered so many of those people to whom we look for leadership in dress. Just naturally they are going to wear their best and their newest when it comes to a wedding day, and at these gatherings we find costumes that set our imaginations working or spur us on to steps in that established direction.

The wedding this season is no exception to the general rule of ultra simplicity in the way of clothes. Everything, from the baby flower girl's garb to the costume of the bride, is done in series of lines, with no unnecessary decoration, no trimming that might have been dispensed with. It is noticeable that the beauty and distinguished quality of the materials employed for the dresses of the bridal party a rare and wonderful. No expense is been spared to make the foundation of these costumes so handsome that almost anything that might be done with them in the way of design and making would insure their ultimate success.

Period styles, into which the season's costumes have arranged themselves, are particularly adaptable to the bride's dress, which can be combined with designs for her maids and other attendants until the composition makes the prettiest sort of a picture. After all, the essential requisite of the successfully beautiful wedding is that it shall be picturesque. It demands all the elements of pageantry for its expression, and it needs all of the prettiest costumes of the season to insure its success as a well-arranged display. At no other time have girls so much chance to surround themselves with the setting which means so much to their own beauty. At no other time are they so surely certain to stand out as beautiful beings—parts of a picturesque whole.

Full Skirts, Drooping Shoulders.

A wedding of this season which met with all sorts of commendation from those who were looking only for beauty of effect was one at which the costumes were designed along Victorian lines. Every dress had full skirts and drooping shoulders. The hats were wide and drooping. There were wide ribbon sashes and the skirts just barely cleared the ground. You can see, at the first suggestion, what a very fertile field this general principle of design supplied. Every line was flowing and soft and beautiful, and a great many of the same sort of lines arranged in suitable settings produced a picture which would be difficult to equal.

The bride's dress was made from pearl white taffeta. Its skirt was wide and sprending, nothing being arranged in the way of hoops, but so much of the stiff material being employed that the skirt puffed out quite sumptuously and beautifully in a swooping line to the floor. With this there was a bodice that draped snugly to the lines of the figure and a low neckline that dropped over the shoulders in that careless way that was known during the Victorian era. About the graceful neck there was arranged a deep bertha of duchess lace, one that reached almost to the waistline and curved its way across the back, over the arms, meeting directly in front. The tiniest of ribbon sashes marked the line between the tight waist and the full skirt.

Combination of Lace and Crepe Makes Gown for the Matron of Honor.

Now, with this gown there was worn a veil of tulle, arranged in a full but closely fitting cap, confined over the brow with a banding of orange blossoms. From the back and sides this cape reached into great billowy coverings of bridal veil that ended just a shade before reaching the bottom of the skirt. There was no train, not

HISTORY AND POLITICS.

Eight school histories should be barred as "pro-British" and "anti-American" from the public schools of New York, declares David Hirshfield, commissioner of accounts, in a 40,000-word report to Mayor Hylan. The writers of those school histories are David Saville Muzzey (Columbia), Albert Bushnell Hart (Harvard), Willis Mason West (University of Minnesota), Andrew C. McLaughlin (Chicago), Claude H. Van Tyne (University of Michigan), William Backus Guitteau (director of schools, Toledo), O H. Ward (Taft School, Watertown, Conn.), and Everett Barnes of Brooklyn. Mr. Hirshfield charges that the school text-books of these well known historians were written during or after the war in order to destroy the traditional American patriotic views of the wars and quarrels between this country and Great Britain.

The quotations from these histories appearing in the New York Times's three-column summary of the long Hirshfield report do not prove pro-British propaganda, but some of them do indicate forgetfulness on the part of the writer that he is addressing himself, not to intelligent adults, but to unreflecting children in whom it is desirable to instill patriotism. All the facts, complete frankness, and the fullest criticism where it is just, are desirable in a voluminous history for adults, but a short history for schools can be little more than a general outline, with but few particulars, and manifestly these should be selected with a view to giving the child a favorable impression of his country's founders. "Historical honesty" does not necessitate the shocking of the youthful mind with a startling frankness which may tend to destroy in him the virtue of veneration and to make of him a more or less conceited critic before his time.

For the rest, it must be said that Mr. Hirshfield is much more open to criticism than the men he attacks—if we are to judge from the showing before us. He is the propagandist, not the historians he brings to the bar. His anglophobia is so extreme that it seems to have made complete shipwreck of his judgment. He is also a political partisan in a domestic sense, complaining of one of the historians he would condemn for speaking favorably of the League of Nations idea. He reveals himself as the victim of a curious delusion—that the college professors and the "money power" (strange combination), together with a number of societies which he names, are united in a conspiracy to ridicule American patriotism and make the United States a part of the British empire. His extravagance along this line goes as far as the assertion that the Carnegie libraries and foundation are working industriously toward the realization of Andrew Carnegie's "dream" of a "reunited state, the British-American Union." He deliberately declares that advocacy of the League of Nations, the four-power treaty, and the International Court, are "all part of the same plot."

If Mr Hirshfield were an embittered German-American—a possibility suggested by his name—he could hardly be more extravagant or absurd in many of his statements.

THE RACE QUESTION.

The movement of negroes from the south to the north naturally disturbs southern employers who in consequence face a shortage of labor, but prominent southern newspapers take a hopeful view of the matter. According to the New Orleans Picayune, an increasing number of southern men accept the situation "philosophically, even cheerfully," welcoming the prospect of a "whiter" south and a "blacker" north, of increased white immigration hitherto checked by the presence of the negroes in great bulk, and calling to mind the fact that labor-saving machinery has made up in other parts of the country for much of the loss of farm labor. In the view of the Columbia, S. C., State "It is nonsense to pretend that South Carolina would not be tremendously improved were 400,000 of its 800,000 negroes to migrate in the next ten years, so that the commonwealth would have two whites to one black." The Charlotte, N. C., Observer, considering the industrial side of the question, hails the "incoming of the tractor" as "the modern supplanter of the negro and the mule."

Political and social as well as ultimate industrial benefits have been predicted, on the ground that a more equal distribution of the blacks throughout the country would divide the responsibility between north and south, make the latter no longer a target of criticism as it wrestles with the old "problem," bring the north equally to account, and thus eliminate sectionalism and "politics" from the question. Undoubtedly this would be a benefit to the south and possibly to the blacks also. It is not so certain that the incorporation of a large share of the black population would be more than a temporary industrial benefit to the north, where, contrary to the surface view, race prejudice is a factor to be reckoned with, as startling anti-negro outbreaks, particularly in the Middle West, have repeatedly shown.

A recognition of the possibility of undesirable developments and a certain uneasiness are shown by the Springfield, Mass., Republican, when, in discussing this side of the matter, it says: "The continuing exodus of negroes seems to presage a new era of much importance both to the south and the north. It is not impossible that the problem which it presents will prove more serious in the latter region than in the former. In spite of handicaps upon the negro's welfare and progress the two races in the south have developed a certain modus vivendi which has on the whole resulted in tolerable and fairly decent relationships. So far there has been comparatively little friction between the races in the north, though the wartime immigration period was not without its disquieting, if not ominous, outbreaks." In the middle west there were "outbreaks" of the sort referred to long before the war. The Republican significantly adds that "the first requisite of a policy which shall reduce the danger of friction to a minimum is, of course, the fair treatment of the newcomer," and urges that "the enlightened and public-spirited citizens of both races must cooperate more fully than they have done to see that these first principles of policy are maintained."

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. What makes the flesh of some brook trout pink like that of salmon?

The pink tint is thought due to feeding on crustacea, fresh water shrimp, etc., that are found in the mouth of a stream that empties into salt water, and which is stocked with marine forms of growth. That there is some element in this type of food that produces pink coloration is also noted in the case of certain birds, flamingoes, which lose their bright pink color unless supplied with this type of shell-fish diet.

2. I found an odd nest in a sort of pocket behind loose bark on a tree trunk, but I couldn't see any bird and it was empty. Can you give any hint?

It might have been a brown creeper's nest, as it uses as site frequently the loosened bark of a tree trunk. In California the redwoods and cedars often have creeper's nests installed, as the rough outer bark of these trees gives many convenient crevices in which to tuck the nest. The nest itself is a soft bundle of fine bark shreds, silky cocoons or webs of insects, and feathers.

3. When do red foxes mate, and is it the same season as the gray?

The red fox mates in late February or early March and the young are born in late April or May. The gray fox does not produce its young until into May, its mating season being a trifle later than the red's. Gray foxes eat more vegetable diet than red ones and their time for raising a young family is perhaps influenced somewhat by the abundance of food supply as the season advances.

DAIRY LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING

The Dairymen's League News says:

The annual meeting of the Dairymen's League cooperative Association, Inc., will take place at the state armory, Utica, N. Y., on Thursday, June 21. The event promises to attract much attention in the business world generally and in agricultural circles in particular, owing to the remarkable progress made by the association in the past year in the development of its plan for the orderly marketing of milk and milk products.

Each of the association's over 900 locals will send one delegate who is empowered to cast one vote on any and all matters that may come before the meeting. The delegates will sit according to their directors' districts. Association members are urged to attend in order to keep posted on the details of their big business operations.

George W. Slocum, president of the association, will call the big gathering to order at 10 a. m., standard time. The meeting will take up the greater part of the day, the afternoon session starting at 1.15 o'clock.

The annual reports of President Slocum, Secretary Albert Manning and Treasurer Bruce M. Kilpatrick will provide the delegates with a vast amount of information concerning the development of all phases of the organization's activities during the past year.

John D. Miller, vice president and general counsel of the association, is scheduled to make the principal address. Mr. Miller is president of the National Milk Producers' Federation.

H. M. Eppes of Accord, N. Y., will lead the community singing which always has been a feature of previous annual gatherings.

Arrangements have been made whereby the railroads will allow a reduction of 25 per cent in fares to Utica and return to everybody attending the convention. Delegates and members should arrange for this special transportation with their local railroad ticket agents before starting for Utica.

The board of directors of the association will meet at the Dairymen's League Building in Utica on Wednesday, June 20, to wind up their business for the year. The new board of directors will organize on Friday, June 22, and elect officers for the ensuing year.

BULGARIANS ARE SHARPLY DIVIDED

Fighting Between Forces of New Premier, Zankoff, and Peasants—Parliament to Try Stambulisky if Government Can Capture Him.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, June 13.—Further disorders were reported from Bulgaria today but the real situation is obscured by a rigorous censorship imposed by the new revolutionary government at Sofia.

Revolutionary troops engaged the body guard of former Premier Alexander Stambulisky. Casualties resulted, but the outcome of the skirmish is not known. A report from the Bulgarian frontier just before noon said 300 members of the body guard had surrendered. A later dispatched mentioned the fray but made no mention of any surrenders.

M. Douralikoff, former minister of agriculture in the "peasant government," was arrested while trying to reach the Turkish border.

An unconfirmed report was received here from Paris that a large peasant army, estimated at almost 100,000 men in numbers, was moving upon Sofia.

The Zankoff government at Sofia has advised the diplomatic corps that there will be no change in Bulgarian foreign policy and that the government's chief aim will be to maintain Balkan peace.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Vienna quoted a Belgrade report as saying that the Sofia government has proclaimed martial law throughout the entire nation. According to this same source skirmishing broke out between government forces and peasant volunteers near Pazardkill, the latter claiming a success.

Many Bulgarian newspapers have been suspended.

Vienna and Belgrade have been the chief sources of Bulgarian reports, most of which are conflicting. One Vienna dispatch said the chief of police at Sofia refused to turn over his office and was shot down. Later fighting broke out in Sofia during which machine guns were employed. The Agrarians were overpowered and dispersed.

A Central News dispatch said government troops were under orders to capture Stambulisky alive if possible. He and the other members of his government will be detained until parliament decides what shall be their fate.

A serious situation prevails at Tarlibrod, in Northern Bulgaria. Peasants refused to support the revolutionary government and threatened death to any one who did.

It is alleged that large sums of money consisting largely of foreign currency were found in Stambulisky's home. Soldiers who raided the place said they discovered perfumes and cosmetics. This news furnished ammunition for Stambulisky's enemies as the former premier had preached against luxuries and the "idle class of women who wasted money on beautifiers."

A remarkable feature of the situation is the rise in value of Bulgarian money on the exchange market. The Bulgarian leva is quoted at a higher figure than the Rumanian lei or the Jugo-Slav dinar. This is evidently due to the new premier, Zanhoff, who is one of the foremost economists in the country.

STUDENT B LEAGUE RESULTS

The Student B baseball league of the local Y. M. C. A. is developing some fine players. The games are running along in big league style, most of the scores being very close.

On Tuesday afternoon the Giants tied for second place in the league by taking a game from the Tigers. The action was fast and exciting, especially along to the end. The Tigers had been leading all through the game and when the last inning was started they were in the lead 4-3. In their turn at bat the Tigers scored two runs, making it 6-3 in their favor. Then the Giants came in. The first man up was out at first. The next two men were walked. The batter following hit, making the bases full. The two nearest the plate stole home right in succession. Another fanned out. The next hit and another hit scored the tying run. Another hit was made. In his anxiety at getting the ball to first on time, the second baseman, who had caught the ball, dropped it, and the man on third ran home, scoring the winning run.

In yesterday's game, O'Reilly and Slater were the batteries for the Giants, while the Tigers had two. Clark and Merritt starting off and Carpenter and Kelly finishing. O'Reilly struck out 8, Clark 3 and Carpenter 7. O'Reilly allowed 4 hits and gave 4 bases on balls; Clark allowed 2 hits and 4 walks; Carpenter allowed 3 hits and 3 walks.

The run winners were: (Giants) Flannagan (2), Johnston; (Tigers) J. Clark, Slater, Fushsle, O'Reilly, Merritt, Wells, McBride (2), H. Merrill, W. Hyatt.

On Monday afternoon the Indians won against the Giants 11-9. This also a good game, but not as exciting as the Tuesday game. The Indians used Williams and Walsh for their batteries, while O'Reilly and Slater were the batteries for the Giants.

The Indians scored 5 hits and the Giants 6. O'Reilly struck out 7 men and Williams 6. O'Reilly allowed 8 bases on balls and Williams 6.

In both these games, Ray Safford acted as umpire.

Tomorrow the Yankees will meet the Tigers, Friday the Cardinals play the Yankees and Monday the Cardinals and the Giants will have it out.

The standing of the teams in the league is as follows:

Team.	W.	L.	Pct.
Giants	2	0	1.000
Indians	2	0	1.000
Tigers	1	1	.500
Giants	1	1	.500
Cardinals	0	1	.000
Yankees	0	1	.000

COLLISION AT STONY HOLLOW

Motorcycle and Sedan Come Together On Notoriously Bad Turn and Six People Go Down 80-foot Embankment, All Escaping Serious Injury.

Another accident happened at the Stony Hollow turn Tuesday afternoon in which six people had a most miraculous escape from death. Five of the people in a car were hurled over a thirty foot embankment and landed at the bottom with a few minor injuries while the sixth person William Warner of 74 Henry street this city who was operating a motorcycle was jammed up against the guard rail and then thrown backwards from his machine and over the fence and down the embankment to receive only minor injuries which are not expected to result seriously.

A new Durant sport-sedan was proceeding down the road toward Kingston while the motorcycle was going up the hill in the opposite direction. At the extreme angle of the turn the two came together. The motorcycle was forced against the rail with sufficient force to wreck it while the car continued on through the guard rail and down an almost perpendicular retaining wall which holds the road at this point. The car landed at the bottom of the thirty foot descent with its front end buried in the mud and slime. The car remained in an upright position all the way down the bank and except for a broken wind-shield and damage about the front was but little damaged.

Abraham Harkavy owned and drove the car and in the front seat with him was his wife. She was cut by glass, and was taken to the Kingston City Hospital where her wounds were cared for and later she left with the other members of the party for home. They reside at 1475 58th street Brooklyn.

In the rear seat of the car were Mr. and Mrs. Philips who have a home in the Bronx and also at Hunter. They were cut and lacerated but after treatment at the hospital returned home Tuesday evening. Mrs. L Harkavy who resides at Hunter was also on the rear seat.

Shortly after the accident William von Berg and Fred Sahloff of this city arrived at the scene of the accident and conveyed the injured people to the hospital where Drs. Stern and Connelly dressed their wounds.

Warner who at first was thought to be very seriously injured was examined by Dr. Stern who found that except for lacerations about the head and body was not badly hurt. He remained at the hospital and today his condition was reported as good.

After the accident happened Mr. Harkavy stated that he was driving slowly as he was familiar with the turn. Just how the accident happened could not be learned but tracks left on the roadway showed that both vehicles were to their left of the center of the highway as they approached the turn. Corporal Lounsberry of the state troopers was at the scene of the accident shortly after it took place and kept traffic moving on the turn. A great number of spectators stopped to view the wreck and marvel over the miraculous escape of all of the parties involved. The point where the accident happened is one of the most dangerous spots in this section of the state and several serious accidents have taken place within a short distance of Tuesday's accident.

Barred "Bill" Springer.

Former Representative Joseph G. Cannon tells this: William Ralls Morrison was a member of the house of representatives from Illinois in the '80s of the last century. William M. Springer was a colleague. There was no love lost between Messrs. Morrison and Springer. They did not get on well together. Morrison made no secret of his dislike for Springer.

"While in congress Morrison had a very sick spell at the Willard hotel. I and several other members of the house went down to see him. We cheered him as best we could and left him feeling better, but just as we were about to go, he said:

"'Boys, I may get the final summons, for I am in a bad way. Therefore, I want to say a few words to you: If I die you will have something to say about me in the house. That is all right. Anything that Sunset Cox might say would please me very much, for he is a fine fellow. What Bill Holliman (William Steele Holliman of Indiana) has to say will delight me. If Billy Breckinridge (William Campbell Preston Breckinridge of Kentucky) speaks he will be eloquent and sincere. His words will fall about me like beautiful, fresh flowers.

"'But if Bill Springer attempts to speak one of you call for the previous question.'"—Chicago Journal.

Warlike People of Abyssinia.

The warlike people of Abyssinia are all armed, and no man affronts another without cause. They owe allegiance to Zeoditou, granddaughter of Menelik II, emperor of Abyssinia, king of kings of Ethiopia. Zeoditou can call into the field a regular army twice as great in numbers as the standing army of the United States. Some of these warriors eat raw flesh, yet all can shoot and handle modern rapid-fire guns. Many of the customs are more barbaric than those of the Middle ages, although Abyssinia is a Christian nation. The Christian warriors of Abyssinia fought against the Turks in Tripoli. For centuries they have kept the Mohammedans out of domination in Africa. They formed a proud and independent nation before the day of the Crusaders.

Faith Must Stand by Itself.

Let none henceforth seek needless cause to approve the faith they own; when earnestly they seek such proof, conclude they then begin to fail.—Milton.

IMPROVED ROADS

Smooth Surface Needed for Concrete Highways

If we are going to construct a concrete surface for our primary roads, it is very important that the surface of the concrete should be made smooth. Not only does this smoothness add to the comfort of the traffic, but it is also a factor in the lasting quality of the road surface. The ordinary layman very seldom thinks of the impact as the load passes over the rough road. If the pavement is rough the impact may be serious. Recent experiments by the United States bureau of roads have given us data concerning this impact, which are very interesting.

For instance, if truck wheels drop one inch when traveling at a speed of 16 miles an hour, and if the wheel load is 8,000 pounds, they will deliver a blow to the pavement of 56,000 pounds, or seven times as much as the load of the wheel. Under the same load, the pneumatic tired wheels deliver an impact equivalent to 14,000 pounds.

Often this impact is not caused by rough pavement but by a defective wheel, or a small obstruction dropped on the road surface, or if large skid chains are used. The wheel strikes the obstruction, rises over it, and falls, delivering an impact. Or, if the solid rubber tire is defective, each revolution of the wheel delivers an impact to the pavement.

It may be that with our heavy truck traffic, the cement surfacing will be stressed to an extreme extent by this impact on account of the rough surface or defective wheel. The surface cracks and breaks, and repairs are necessary.

The surface of the concrete for our roads can be made smooth if care is taken in surfacing the same, and the inspectors should see to it that this surfacing is rightly done.—E. B. House, Colorado Agricultural College.

Jacks Protect Highways From Overloaded Trucks

Weighing jacks with which the load carried by a heavy truck may be ascertained by road police are helping Maryland protect its new state roads from damage by overweight vehicles. Most roads are constructed to withstand a moving load of ten tons. Heavier loads break down the subgrade and start ruts, the police assert.

Each weighing machine consists of a screwjack operating in an oil-filled cylinder. When four of these jacks are placed under the suspected truck, lifting it clear of the ground, its weight is transferred to the oil cylinders and can be read directly on the pressure gauges. If the truck is found to weigh more than ten tons, the excess material is unloaded by the roadside. The jacks are of aluminum alloy, weighing only 40 pounds each, so that the inspectors can carry them about in a light car.

State officials estimate that this supervision reduced overloading 75 per cent within 30 days. California has also recently passed a law limiting the weight of motor-trucks, and road officials and taxpayers are seeking to reduce the maximum permissible weight below the limit now set—30,000 pounds gross weight for four-wheeled trucks, and 40,000 pounds for six-wheeled vehicles, providing the axles are at least 90 inches apart, and there are not more than 800 pounds on each inch of rubber tire width.—Popular Science Monthly.

Iron Ore Quite Useful in Road Construction

Iron ore, found in northwestern Louisiana, has proven of great value in road building in that state and, in some localities where it has been used, has effected a saving of $2,000 to $3,000 a mile in the cost of construction. Highway engineers in Louisiana have been using the ore as a binder instead of sand clay and have found it far superior to that material in many instances. During 1922 the Louisiana state highway department completed 350 miles of new roads. Most of this mileage consists of gravel. The remainder consists of roads built of shells, sheet asphalt or bituhithic. The 1923 program includes a larger amount of asphaltic construction.

Growing Popularity of Autos Shows Road Needs

With the growing popularity of the automobile, there has come a parallel increase in the need of building up the highways. Of course, it is not to be done within a few years. Many sections of the Old World have excellent highways, but they have been built for centuries. But certainly we should begin now to lay the foundation of a great highway system.

Many Motor Vehicles.

According to figures compiled by the bureau of public roads in Washington, there are 12,238,375 motor vehicles in the United States. The report shows 10,890,112 private passenger cars, 60,459 taxicabs, busses and cars for hire, 182,714 motorcycles and 29,328 trailers.

Illinois State Roads.

The Illinois highway commission is working toward the completion of 1,000 miles of state paved road, or approximately enough to give an ardent tourist a run for his money.

New Device for Testing Milk.

A novel gauge has been patented for testing milk at home. By use of the glass tube, it is possible to determine whether milk has been skimmed or diluted with water. The lower the tester sinks into the milk, the greater the dilution. A graduated scale records the result.

MRS. CROKER NOT SO CONFIDENT

In Face of Testimony That She Was Known as Mrs. Guy Marone in Several Places.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Dublin, June 13.—Sitting wearily in court with her diamond ringed hands shading her half closed eyes, Mrs. Bula Croker, widow of the late Richard Croker, New York politician, seemed today to be on the verge of losing her stoicism with which she had listened to damaging testimony against her in the suit to break her husband's will.

Mrs. Croker has claimed to be a Cherokee Indian princess, her mother being a member of that Oklahoma tribe.

The will contestation was brought by her husband's children by his first marriage.

Mrs. Kathleen Addiss of Northampton, Mass., testified that Mrs. Croker is the same woman she knew socially as Mrs. Guy Marone in 1912.

Mrs. Margaret McDonald of Munston, N. B., testified she hired Marone as a tailor in 1913. According to the witness Mrs. Croker is the same woman Marone introduced as his wife at that time. Mrs. McDonald said she saw Mrs. and Mr. Richard Croker, Sr., at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in 1921, and recognized the latter as the woman she had known previously as Mrs. Marone.

"I knew because she had the same habit of turning in her toes and I recognized her voice as well," added the witness.

One of the allegations of the contestants is that Mrs. Croker was married to Marone when she married Croker in New York in 1914.

Christian Thankfulness.

Helen Blossom Martin.

This is a new photograph of Helen Blossom Martin, New York nurse and secretary to a physician, who was strangled to death by Eleugia Lazade, a Filipino servant in the physician's household. Later the Filipino was arrested as he sought to throw her body into the river. It is revealed that the nurse was the occupant of a "love nest" maintained for her by a millionaire shoe manufacturer, a married man, and that the Filipino killed her for jealousy.

STEP TO DEEPEN THE ST. LAWRENCE

U. S. Asks Canada to Call Conference to Consider Matter—Canada Hopes We Will Pay Part of Construction Cost.

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Ottawa, Ont., June 13.—The United States government has asked Canada to call a conference between the two nations to negotiate a treaty by which the St. Lawrence river can be converted into a deep waterway, George P. Graham, minister of railways and canals, announced today.

The proposed conference is heralded here as the first official step toward the completion of the project.

The St. Lawrence waterway is being advocated chiefly by Canadian and mid-western interests in the United States. So far, Graham said, the United States government had not discussed sharing the financial burden of such a project. Canada, however, hopes to recover a portion of the cost of the construction from the United States in the event the proposal is put through, the minister stated.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Seasonable Style.

The width of the skirt at the foot is 2½ yards.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size requires 4½ yards of one material 36 inches wide. For waist, sleeves and cuff and pocket facings of contrasting material, 1⅞ yards of 32 inches wide are required.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

HONOR PRIEST FOR YEARS OF SERVICE

The Rev. Fr. Scully Guest of Honor at St. Mary's Hall Where He Is Recipient of Congratulations, Praise and a Gold Watch.

At St. Mary's school hall Tuesday evening, two hundred and five men of St. Mary's congregation and of other creeds throughout the community attended the banquet in honor of the fifteenth anniversary of the ordination to the holy priesthood of the Rev. Joseph B. Scully, pastor of St. Mary's Church. Together with the laymen, the following priests were present to offer their congratulations: The Very Rev. Joseph B. Cushman, of St. Joseph's Church, the Rev. John P. Neumann, of St. Peter's, the Rev. J. J. Corbett, of Wilbur, the Rev. Edward Higgins, of Rosendale, the Rev. John de Krom, of the Benedictine Hospital, the Rev. Joseph Ostermann, of St. Peters, the Rev. Edmund P. Murray, of Staten Island, the Rev. George Fagan, of New York city, and the Rev. John J. Duffy and the Rev. Father Keane, of St. Mary's.

Andrew J. Cook was the toastmaster of the evening. Balfe's orchestra supplied the music. Following the delicious dinner, those present joined in community singing. After the opening remarks by Toastmaster Cook, Thomas Dolan rendered very beautifully a number of solos.

Before introducing the first speaker of the evening Mr. Cook conveyed on behalf of the men of St. Mary's and all the parishioners, congratulations upon the anniversary of Father Scully's fifteen years in the priesthood. He also expressed the desire that St. Mary's and Rondout may be honored with the celebration of the silver and golden anniversaries and even his diamond jubilee.

Dean Cushman, the first speaker of the evening gave an outline of Father Scully's work since his ordination. In part he said, "When the sacrament of holy orders is bestowed upon a priest he is made lawyer, doctor and engineer. As a lawyer he performs in the sacred tribunal of penance, a doctor he mends the soul of the sinner and as an engineer he levels every valley and lays low every mountain for the children of the faith. Father Scully's first assignment was as an assistant in a large parish in New York city. His efforts and accomplishments were so pronounced here, through his priestliness and his well known eloquence that the superiors of the archdiocese chose him a member of the missionary band to go to small communities and give missions. His renowned ability was again recognized and he was appointed secretary to the late lamented Bishop Cusack, at which assignment he stayed a year and a half. A much greater work was then chosen for the learned Father, when out of seven hundred priests in the archdiocese he was picked to instruct the students at St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie. Through this arduous work Father Scully struggled until his health gave out. It was then he was stationed at Phoenicia, where his work as a pastor in this small place was so noticeable that again his superiors gave him the fine promotion to St. Mary's, Rondout." In closing Father Cushman congratulated Father Scully upon the fifteenth anniversary in the priesthood and also congratulated St. Mary's in having the Rev. Father as its pastor.

Father Neumann was the next to offer felicitations to Father Scully and in his short talk he emphasized the ability of Father Scully to give counsel to the parishioners of St. Mary's.

John Mack was next on the program and he amused his hearers with a number of jokes. John Gallagher was encored several times rendering latest song hits. Father Duffy when called upon expressed his congratulations to his pastor and on behalf of the young men and boys of the parish he expressed their joy upon this occasion. Clarence Schryver followed with a very beautiful solo which was loudly applauded. Father Fagan responded and expressed his congratulations and also his sorrow upon leaving St. Mary's and his good pastor.

On behalf of the men of St. Mary's Joseph Sullivan presented the Rev. Father Scully with a watch and charm. Mr. Sullivan said:

"I appear on the program this evening as the spokesman for the men of old St. Mary's, not only those here assembled, but also those who for various reasons are not present. On many occasions you have spoken of the remarkable love that the people of St. Mary's have shown for their church and for their pastors, even after they have been away for many years in other surroundings. It is true, we do love good old St. Mary's and all that she stands for and has stood for since 1839 when the first small chapel was erected here in which the holy sacrifice of the Mass was offered even before a resident pastor was appointed. We also have loved our pastors and priests, and there has never been a pastor of this parish to whose record we cannot proudly point, or one who has not done some particular work for the honor and glory of God, and the advancement of religion. We think it is a great honor for any priest to be called to the pastorate of St. Mary's Church. Among the sixteen pastors who have preceded you Father Scully, in charge of this parish, there have been many learned and distinguished clergymen. Two of them were raised to the rank of bishop, one to be vicar-general of New York, and one was made monsignor.

"But we feel this evening that the pastorate of our old church has fallen into worthy hands, we are convinced that you who have been with us for so short a time, are fully capable of leading us forward and you have shown your willingness to do so. On the occasion of your appointment to this charge last October our distinguished toastmaster who was the speaker of the evening, here in this hall pledged to you the loyal support of all the people of St. Mary's. Now tonight, I speaking especially for the men, renew that pledge, and promise you the same earnest, loyal support and cooperation of all our men, that has been given to your predecessors. But the men were not satisfied with this, they felt that there should be something more than the spoken word to remind you of their love and loyalty. Therefore on this important occasion, marking as it does one of the great events in your life, the fifteenth anniversary of your ordination, it is my happy privilege to present in their behalf this watch which we hope will ever keep before you the love of the people of St. Mary's as well as the love of your assistants for you, this fob and charm attached being their private gift.

"Dear pastor, may time which this gift ticks off so accurately, deal gently with you, and bring to you new zeal for the salvation of souls, and give you added strength and courage to continue the work you have so well begun. And when the time shall come that you, too, shall be raised to the bishopric or called to the higher life, may your record be such as to compare favorably with that of the great men who have preceded you as pastor of old St. Mary's."

In response to all that had been said about him, Father Scully said words failed him and that he was unworthy of all the praise that had been bestowed upon him. Then in a very eloquent address, which will long linger in the hearts of the men of St. Mary's, Father Scully spoke of the great need of developing the spiritual life of the men today to combat universal evils. "To conquer these opposing forces by might for might, force for force, would be to cast away all that has been done and that stands for Catholicity." In the same manner that our Saviour conquered the world, Father Scully emphasized this also was the manner for them to do. In closing he told of his sorrow in losing the assistance of Father Fagan.

Many others present shook hands warmly with the Rev. Father Scully before the meeting came to an end.

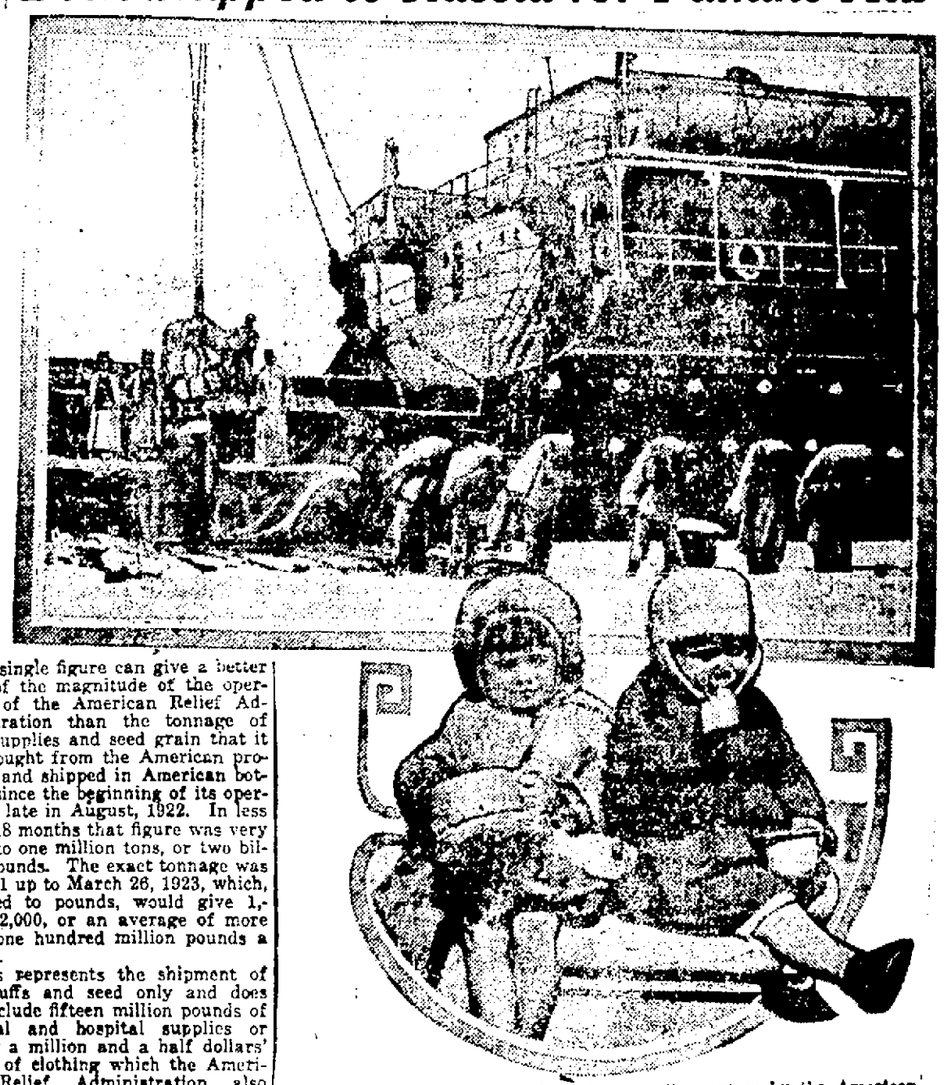
More Than One Hundred Million Pounds of Food and Seed Grain a Month Has Been Shipped to Russia for Famine Aid



No single figure can give a better idea of the magnitude of the operation of the American Relief Administration than the tonnage of food supplies and seed grain that it has bought from the American producer and shipped in American bottoms since the beginning of its operations late in August, 1922. In less than 18 months that figure was very close to one million tons, or two billion pounds. The exact tonnage was 912,121 up to March 26, 1923, which, reduced to pounds, would give 1,824,242,000, or an average of more than one hundred million pounds a month.

This represents the shipment of foodstuffs and seed only and does not include fifteen million pounds of medical and hospital supplies or nearly a million and a half dollars' worth of clothing which the American Relief Administration also shipped from America as a part of its Russian Relief program during the same period.

The food supplies and seed grains required 237 different ships and this does not take into account the numerous trans-shipments from Danzig and Hamburg to Russian [illegible] vessels, nor numerous shipments from the United States in small lots by liners. Sixty-nine different ships carried the medical supplies and the cost of transportation and handling of the medical supplies alone, which was covered by a single contribution, was $267,400.

The estimated resources mobilized from all quarters by the American Relief Administration under the direction of Herbert Hoover, for distribution in Russia under its agreed control will, up to the close of the present program after the coming harvest, amount to upwards of 200,000,000. No money went out of the country.

PICTURE BOOKS FOR BABY

By FRANCES JENKINS OLCOTT.

"Buy only the best picture books for my baby!" a mother exclaims. "Why, anything will do, if it is bright-colored and will not tear."

But will anything do? Baby's brain is eager and alert. He is taking in a stock of ideas to use when he begins to speak and read. He is imitative, and is learning to do the things he sees done in his pictures. He is developing his sense of color.

Pictures may be made the beginning of baby's education as well as a delight to him. And what a joy he takes in entering into the life he sees in each bright-colored print! But he will not learn from them unless they please him. He likes best, primary colors, and large figures of animals and of children at work or play. His first books should be untearable, so that he will not be able to destroy them whenever the impulse seizes him. The term untearable or indestructible, however, does not guarantee that a book will not be destroyed by rough handling.

The picture books listed below are selected from among the best of their kind. Unfortunately many desirable linen books are out of print on account of the war, while cheaply printed, dull-colored ones are taking their places. The books recommended in this list are still in print, and all are educational—fanciful or humorous—and will delight baby for the first year of his life and until he is four years old and older.

Mother may begin to play with him at choosing objects in the pictures, calling off the name of each object as he points to it. This little game will please him and will teach him new words and their meaning.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

We traveled through the soundless night,
And breathed the fragrant June, bright
With an unwaning moon;
Till from the whitened field the wood
Rose dark along the hill,
And there with sudden joy we stood
To hear thee, whip-poor-will!

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Paint the outside of the screens, doors and windows, as well as the porch screens, with a thin white paint. It is easy to look out, but those outside cannot look it.

To prevent flies and odors around the garbage can, cover the can with a cloth which has been moistened with kerosene, then place the cover on top of the cloth. Renew the wetting once in two weeks.

Try wiping the screens with kerosene where flies gather and come in every time the screen is opened. This will keep the flies away and if the kerosene is used in small amounts it is not objectionable. Once a week repeat the process.

Where several find it necessary to use the same bathroom a great convenience is a small basket, lined with linen or painted white, in which one may carry soap, tooth paste, powder, toothbrush and washcloth. They may be carried and returned all together, saving trips back and forth. The basket may be only useful or exceedingly ornamental, as one desires; but it will be found a great convenience. A large market basket, lined with fresh paper, is a most helpful aid in the house. Carry the laundry upstairs or jars and glasses to the basement; useful for bringing up vegetables, or returning articles from room to room.

When going on picnic suppers the little individual cups of paper may be used to serve the salad, providing a bit of green for garnishing. Paper plates and napkins are light and save work.

When a funnel is needed and none is at hand, use a tube cakepan. It will work as neatly as one made for the purpose.

Keep a cube of magnesia at hand to rub over white shoes until they can be well cleaned. For an emergency this is a quick-cleaning method.

Religious Cursing.

The present movement in connection with prayer book revision in the Church of England for the removal of the imprecatory psalms from the services of the church is not really anything new. So long ago as the Fourth century St. Paulinus of Nola was troubled about these psalms, and said that they must be interpreted allegorically. Thus in the one hundred and thirty-seventh he said of the words: "O daughter of Babylon . . . happy shall he be that taketh thy little ones and dasheth them against a stone," he wrote that by the children of the daughter of Babylon the Christian must understand his sins, which are to be torn up and dashed against the Rock of Salvation.—Exchange.

Did Robin Hood Exist?

There is practically undeniable evidence that the Robin Hood of fanciful literature was anything but a creature of popular fancy, although most authorities believe that the Robin Hood legends were probably originally based on some grain of truth. Robin Hood is represented in legend and ballad as a noted, possibly titled outlaw who lived in the time of Richard I, of England. With his followers, all of whom were expert archers, he rode about the country robbing the wealthy to give to the poor. Though he killed the king's deer he was loyal in other respects. He is painted as a dashing and gallant knight, who offered protection to women and always championed the cause of the weak.

Collapsible Ladder.

A collapsible orchard ladder, made in two sections, is described in Popular Mechanics Magazine. The upper section of the two-part ladder is disposed at an obtuse angle to the lower one, and terminates in a single rail. As this rail is sheathed, no damage to the bark is possible when it is adjusted between the limbs of a fruit tree, and the fruit picker can pick over a considerable range without having to descend and shift the ladder to a new position.

CRATER LAKE

Ages ago a great, tall, volcanic peak, which has been called Mount Mazama, occupied "a place in the sun" in the southwestern part of Oregon, about half way between Portland and San Francisco. The volcanic action within this mountain produced heat of such intensity and in such quantity that the entire top melted, fell in and disappeared.

Naturally, utter desolation trailed such a tremendous convulsion. Nature, in her mysterious workings, aided by time, changed this condition of affairs and produced a striking geological spectacle which is one of the scenic masterpieces of this earth. The opening or crater in the top of this topless peak gradually filled with water which formed a beautiful, deep blue lake—hence the name, Crater Lake.

This lake, almost circular in shape and about five miles across, is perhaps the deepest body of fresh water on earth. The surface of this lake is more than 6,000 feet above sea level. No inlet or outlet has been discovered. Its waters escape through underground channels which doubtless reappear elsewhere in the form of springs. New waters come from other springs and heavy snows. A belt or girdle of cliffs towers grotesquely above the lake and slope down sharply to the edge of the water.

The lake is invisible until one has climbed to the rim. The look down into it is indescribable. One is simply nonplussed. 'Tis said that this world holds not another sight like it. The heart of this mountain is filled with a sea of sapphire-colored water. First the size and the precipitousness of the surrounding cliffs astonish you; then the unexpected beauty and brilliancy of Nature's coloring amaze you. The great walls of rock are splotched with yellow and pink. The tips of the cliffs carry more or less snow. The trees are a dark green. Below, the placid surface of this bluest of blue lakes reflects the surroundings with astonishing clearness.

Within the lake an island or cinder cone rises several hundred feet above the surface of the water. Geologists conclude this to be the result of expiring volcanic forces. This island contains a crater. This crater contains a pool. So here we have the unduplicated spectacle of a crater within a crater and a pool within a lake.

Another small island pops up out of this lake. As its formation crudely resembles a ship, it is called Phantom Ship. The fitness of the name is appreciated when it is understood that, viewed in certain lights it disappears, to reappear again as the rays of light or your position changes.

Crater Lake has been created a national park by Uncle Sam, in order that his people might come and enjoy the grandeur of this unequalled sight.

The Poet in the Child.

Nothing is ever so beautiful as the things which were beautiful when we were small. We had newly come upon the world. Every object interested us and left a deep impression upon our minds. Every day new objects now grown common to us, dawned upon our consciousness; the edge of our enjoyment of the visible had not been dulled by usage, and there was no whispering crowd of solicitudes to interrupt the bright continuity of our day dreams. The bluest skies and the most silvery stars we know were seen by us not this year, but many years ago; brooks and shrubs and insects, we saw them all magnified and in isolation; every sense was its language. That keenness of observation, that freedom of imaginative adventure, as well as that leisure a grown meditative man must envy, and no man more than a poet. The complementary truth is that most poets deliberately draw very largely upon their memories of childhood for the material of their verse.—J. C. Squire, in "Books Reviewed."

Thanks to a Hat.

In April, 1919, two prospectors in a wornout flivver were bumping over a California road—John Kelly and Hamp Williams—the latter a half-breed Piute Indian. Kelly's hat blew off. Hamp got out and found it in a small hole some prospector had dug years before. Looking at the exposed rock, he said: "This looks like silver ore to me," and filled Kelly's hat with the stuff.

"That's the best hat I've got," objected Kelly. "I wish you would use something else for an ore sampling bag. But we'll have it assayed." Thus was discovered California's largest silver mine, the California-Rand, at Randsburg. In its first year it yielded more than $1,000,000 worth of silver.

IMMIGRANT RUSH BEGINS JULY 1

10,000 Scheduled to Reach Ellis Island at Start of Fiscal Year—1,500 Beds To Accommodate Them.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 13.—Twenty-two starters today toed the mark in what is expected to be the greatest race in world history. They are the 22 foreign liners which, on July 1—the first day of the government's fiscal year—are scheduled to arrive at Ellis Island, melting pot of the nations, with the first of the 357,803 immigrants Uncle Sam will accept for adoption during the next 12 months.

"Thousands of passages have already been booked from Liverpool and Queenstown," steamship company officials here said today.

Ellis Island heads were in a dilemma. "We have but 1,500 beds—what will we do with the 10,000 who will arrive July 1?" they asked.

To complicate matters, officials pointed out Henry H. Curran, new commissioner of immigration, will be in charge on that date. Robert E. Tod, present commissioner, has resigned, effective June 30.

The rush will be the greatest in the history of the immigration department, Tod said today, giving figures of the influx of foreigners during last year.

"It might be supposed that Germany, suffering after-war effects would take advantage of America's offer to admit 67,607 of her citizens. Yet Germany sent over but 40,934—26,673 under her quota. Austria too, fell short, but only by 120.

"On the other hand England's quota of 77,342 was filled within a few months after the beginning of the year. Italy too, sent her allotted 42,057 immigrants over as quickly as possible."

Russia may be the "ideal land" claimed by her champions. "But Russia sent the 24,405 immigrants she was permitted over here with all possible speed," Tod said.

"Norway has failed to fill her quota of 13,202, by 2,290.

"Last year many seeking admission to the United States did not realize that after their country's quotas had been filled they could not be admitted," Tod explained. "Thousands were turned back after reaching Ellis Island. These thousands will try again this year—be among the first arrivals after July 1."

Pancake Tuesday.

An interesting old custom prevails at Newberry, England, every Shrove Tuesday. The church bell rings and a crowd of youngsters assemble at the foot of the church tower. When the bell ceases, a shower of parcels containing pancakes is thrown from the tower. Down below there is a rushing and a scrambling. The strongest and sturdiest secure the prizes. All the parcels disappear, even those lodged in the trees. It is a merry crowd for a few moments. In the great hall of Westminster school, near the abbey, there is a similar scene. The school cook tosses a pancake over the roof beams and the boys scramble for it. Pancake day is probably a reminder of the cakes baked in the coals for Elijah by the angel before his forty-day travel to and fast at Sinai.

Gregorian and Julian Calendars.

The length of the mean Gregorian year may be set down at 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, 12 seconds. The Gregorian calendar was introduced into England and her colonies in 1752, at which time the equinox had retrograded eleven days since the council of Nice in A. D. 325, when the festival of Easter was established and the equinox occurred on March 21; hence September 3, 1752, was called September 14, and at the same time the commencement of the legal year was changed from March 25 to January 1, so that the year 1751 lost the months of January and February and the first 24 days of March. The difference between the Julian and Gregorian calendar is now 12 days. Russia and the Greek church still employ the Julian calendar for civil and ecclesiastical purposes.

The Bouquet of Poppies

By MARY P. McMANUS

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

My affection for Edmund Dane, in its patient forbearance, was almost doglike. He quarreled with me, told me I was a pest and a nuisance, yet his scorn only increased my devotion. I know this doesn't sound like the talk of a red-blooded man, but it was true. Because—well—hang it all, to me Edmund Dane was superman.

He was so far superior to any men I'd ever known, in refinement and perception, that it would be hard for me to believe that the liquor that flowed through his veins was not the divine fluid of the gods.

He hated to admit any return of feeling on his part. Seeing my insistent perseverance he favored me with his apparent contempt, but I knew it wasn't real contempt—it was only a way of hiding his feelings. Often I wondered what was the real man in him—that secret self that he kept hidden.

I used to see him every day. If he were not at the club, I would drop in at his "quarters." But one evening he was not at the club, nor was he at his rooms.

"He left last night without saying when he would return," his landlady informed me.

It was two days before I heard from Dane. The note was left at the club. "Come to my rooms as soon as possible," it read.

Needless to say, I recognized the sender and made haste to Dane's rooms.

The dull apartment was brightened by a bouquet of poppies, artistically arranged on the table. The great change was in the man himself. The pale face, from which shone two marvelously bright eyes, was unusually composed; no frown or irritability was on his brow.

Seated as he was beside the hearth, a cigarette between his slender fingers, he wore the grace and manner of a monarch, yet I had an impression of suffering, of smothered pain.

"Deuced nice of you to come so soon, old fellow," Dane said.

I knew that haste would provoke him, so I, too, lit a cigarette, and we talked for fifteen minutes on commonplace subjects, each burning with a desire to get at the real thing, but each equally fencing.

"Where have you been, Dane?" I asked, as I tried to speak lightly, but the huskiness in my tone could not be mistaken.

"That's just why I sent for you, Collins," Dane was serious, too.

He wheeled around in his chair and looked me square in the eyes, and I saw the real man in him—lonely, isolated in his own knowledge of what had been.

"Collins," he said, "you're the only friend I've got now, and I've treated you like a cur. Don't look surprised—I realize it. I was afraid to let you know me as I was. But you took me for granted, and now I thank you for it.

"Long, long ago, I loved a woman. The happiest days of my life were spent with her. Grace was her name. We talked and laughed and sang together, each of us happiest with the other, our young hearts overflowing with joy and youth and love. We plighted our vows to each other and carved our names on the same oak tree. Then I went abroad to study, dreaming all the time of Grace.

"When I returned I was more reserved, of course, and more shy than when in my youth. I didn't see much of Grace, but I learned one day that she was to be married. I became morose and sullen, hating everything, myself most of all. I went to the wedding to show that I didn't care. But the glance she gave me as she passed down the aisle sent my pulses thrilling, because I know that she saw me and did care.

"Then, after she was married, I passed her one day in her garden. It was a garden of poppies, scarlet and dull red—like the blood that was squeezed from my heart, I thought. She called to me, and reluctantly I obeyed. We talked and laughed together again, like we did in the old days.

"'Why did you do it, Grace?' I asked her.

"She wept softly over the poppies and said: 'I thought you didn't care, so I did it—just for spite.' Then we both laughed through the tears, it was so ridiculous. But it was true, nevertheless.

"I came to this town shortly afterwards, bitter against my lot. I could think of nothing but Grace, and the thought hurt so. Your kindness was lost on me, Collins, because I resented being disturbed in my memories. Then I began to dissipate, to drink, in order to drown all thought. But it was unbearable.

"The other night I thought I must get something to stop that ache, that dull pain that was ever in my heart and the burning fever in my head. I rushed out to find an opium den—there I found forgetfulness for a while. But soon I dreamed of Grace in great fields of poppies, holding some out to me. I dreamed that I offered her a poppy in exchange—a queer mixture of yellow and red. She declined my offering, while great tears streamed down her cheeks.

"Several times I dreamed this dream before its significance thrust itself upon my sub-consciousness. The poppy I was offering her was opium—forgetfulness. The poppies she was offering me were the memories we had in common, happy and unhappy, but sweet always.

"When I awoke I had no desire for opium, and I felt like a new man, lucky in my memories.

"See how beautiful they are, Collins," he said, and I looked at the bouquet on the table.

So Dane has consoled himself ever since by keeping before his eyes the sight of the poppies—red, like the blood that was squeezed from his heart. We are staunch friends now, and, though Edmund Dane seems eccentric to others, it is I who know the secret of his poppies and their especial significance to him.

BELIEVE IN OLD CALENDAR

Japanese Cling to Superstition, Though Government Has Made Effort to Suppress It.

In Japan, 1923 is the year of the wild boar and those born the following 12 months will be characterized by sincerity and rashness, according to Japanese lore. They will be free from material cares and unnecessarily touchy. The government has suppressed the old calendar made up of 12 zodiacal animals, but the people of Japan still derive from it many superstitions and inspiration for their art. Postcards representing the 1923 boar chasing the 1922 dog are on sale all over the city of Tokyo.

This old calendar is of Chinese origin and is common to the Tartars, Turks, Mongols and Tibetans, as well as to the Japanese. The 12 animals are the rat, ox, tiger, hare, dragon, serpent, horse, sheep, monkey, bird, dog and boar and their influence on human destinies is varied. Their power on the human body created a zodiacal anatomy and a special art of healing in the Middle ages.

Those under the influence of the rat are honest, thrifty and a little tricky. They are quiet and should beware of the fair sex. The ox year confers a strong physique, independence and stubbornness; that of the tiger, unusually strong character; that of the hare, charm and grace and a surrounding of good fortune which must be caught before one is thirty-eight. Sons of the dragon have a fiery spirit and conceit and are happiest at twenty-seven, twenty-eight and forty-five. Those of the serpent are melancholy and jealous and destined to live but a short time with their family. Snake girls ought to marry either a merchant, doctor or government official.

People that are brave, kind, loyal and generous are under the sign of the horse; those neat, orderly and hospitable, as well as tender and religious under the goat. Goat people make artists. Monkey born are cold and stern and succeed by associating with others. Bird born ought to be singers and those born under the dog being honest and faithful, should not humble themselves too much for the sake of their friends. They are happy when very young and again in old age.

Campaign Against Ads.

The Ohio state highway department has begun a campaign against advertising placards along highways. It has recently torn down and removed nine truck loads of these signs. This is done under a state law.

Roads in Canada.

At the close of 1922 there had been placed under agreement for federal aid, in connection with the Canadian highway act, 274 projects at an estimated cost of $35,706,991 for 5,786 miles of road in the different provinces.

THE HARD FACTS ABOUT SOFT MONEY

By JOHN OAKWOOD

When a farmer takes his product to market and sells it for, say, a dollar a bushel, he is dependent upon the honesty of two measures—the dollar and the bushel.

• • •

The other day a crossroads storekeeper got sent to jail for manipulating a trick bushel basket with a false bottom that would slide up and down in a way that was grand, gloomy and mysterious. When using it to measure stuff he bought from a farmer he'd secretly shove the bottom up until it held at least a bushel and a quarter, but he would only credit him with a bushel. The buying power of the farmer's product was thereby depreciated by about twenty per cent.

• • •

Finally the farmers thereabouts got wise to the fact that the only way they could get what was coming to them was to enforce a reliable standard of measurement. So they put a few stiff jail penalty on using a false measure, laid for that storekeeper with the trick basket and sent him to prison.

• • •

Politicians in Europe have been manipulating the other measure—the money measure—in much the same way. Some of them in America want to tamper likewise with the dollar. Here is about the way it would work out.

Suppose, when the farmer takes his product to market, the basket measure was honest enough and he got a dollar bill for each bushel. He'd take his dollars home and save them. Perhaps he planned to buy some land next his own for a thousand dollars, and figured that in a year or so he could make it.

• • •

But meanwhile the politicians start to manipulate the base of the currency. They would change it from the gold standard to a fiat money plan—from a gold guarantee to the mere say-so of the government that a piece of paper was worth a dollar. The farmer wouldn't be watching the money-politicians. He would be too busy raising things. At the end of the year he has his thousand dollars. He takes them to the landowner and says, "I'll buy your land now—here's a thousand dollars."

• • •

But the landowner would say, "That is paper money—my land is worth one thousand dollars gold—the government has printed so much paper money folks haven't much confidence in it. But I am willing to take a chance if you will give me a dollar and a quarter in paper money for each gold dollar's value of my land—in other words, I'll give you my land for $1,250 dollars paper."

• • •

Soft money would be only another way for the money-politicians to hand the farmer the same dirty deal as the basket manipulator. In the first case the farmer unknowingly gave a bushel and a quarter of his product, and in the second case he would have to give a dollar and a quarter of his money, for a dollar's value in return.

• • •

In Germany they have carried the manipulation of the mark so far—well, it seems hardly believable, but if they did the same thing to the dollar, it would take over ten million in paper money to buy that land. The primary producer can raise his prices, but not fast enough to equalize this drop in the gold value of unsound money. That is where the catch comes in.

M. E. MISSION CONFERENCE ON

There was an excellent attendance of women from far and near at the Kingston district, Women's Home Missionary Society, held at the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church this morning. Mrs. Baragwanath, the chairman, presided. The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Edmonston and were followed by a few words of cordial greeting from the pastor of the church, the Rev. R. A. Greenwell. Mrs. E. A. Angle, responding. Miss Edith Myer, recording secretary, gave her report, which proved very interesting, and Mrs. James Guttridge, the treasurer, reported the sum of $25.49 in the district treasury, also over $1,100 sent by the district to the conference. Both reports showed marked increase in the membership and work of the district.

Mrs. Frank Thompson, corresponding secretary, had charge of the reports from the auxiliaries of the district, part of them reporting by delegate, and part of the reports being read by Mrs Thompson. All showed increasing membership; active work; development of children's work through Home Guards and Mothers' Jewels organizations. Many of the auxiliaries had sent to different missions, new or second hand but good clothing; and been active in other philanthropies. Most of the auxiliaries were interested in mission study work, and many of them subscribed to the mission paper. Gifts of money were reported for the Watts De Puyster Recreation Hall fund and the Immigrant Home.

The reports were given from Arkville, Catskill, Cornwallville, Delhi, East Durham, Franklin, Fleischmanns, Grand Gorge, Hobart; Kingston, Clinton avenue, Trinity and St. James's M. E. churches; Margaretville and Walton. After the reports, Mrs. Thompson urged that all of the societies try this year to take up the study work which will be "The Child and America's Future," a vital subject these days. She also urged as generous contributions as possible to both the Immigrant Home and the Watts De Puyster Recreation Hall, the same to be sent in by July first, and both greatly needed philanthropies.

Mrs. W. J. Cranston presided at the organ accompanying the singing.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock.

C. OF C. MEMBERSHIP BOOSTED TO 384

Roy S. Smith, executive manager of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, addressed the Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce canvassers today along the lines of how to overcome the indifference and apathy so often manifested by the average citizen in his city's welfare. Mr. Smith has made many addresses here that were pronounced excellent but this was called a corking good one by several who heard it.

Twenty-nine new memberships were reported by the canvassers, which, added to 27 yesterday and the 328 members the Chamber now has makes a total of 384.

The campaign ends tomorrow at noon, when the workers will have luncheon with the Kiwanis Club.

Life of Government Hunter.

There is a romance and atmosphere of adventure associated with the life of a government hunter which is found in but few of the recognized professions and walks of life nowadays. For the man who is adept with firearms, fearless, hardy, robust and perseverant, the business of prairie and mountain policeman is a made-to-order job. For the most part, the national sharpshooters—modern minutemen who are ready at a minute's notice to take up the chase after dangerous grizzly bears, ferocious mountain lions or sly and cunning timber wolves —are recruited from the ranks of former cowboys, frontiersmen, Indian fighters, guides, trappers, hunters, prospectors, foresters, miners, former soldiers and other adventurers who enjoy the fascinating life of matching well sharpened wits with grave dangers.

Yellowstone Park.

Turquoise sky. Crystal clear atmosphere. Across great spaces rampart-like mountains. Nearer, vast armies of watchful, silent pines. In this setting, great climbing terraces, red, yellow and orange, veiled in delicate draperies of steam. Glorious, jewel-like pools of purest blue and richest green. Sunsets of heaven spread upon the earth in lakes of glowing color. Fountains springing heavenward in sparkling grace. Sunny meadows; roads slipping silently through great forests with mountain torrents in chasms below. Crowning all, a vast canyon, its walls aglow with carmine and yellow and orange and lavender. At one end, a snowy cascade flinging itself joyously through space to wind on, a jade green ribbon, through depths below. Curiously but beautifully has nature wrought.—Christian Science Monitor.

Giant Map-Making Camera.

The United States geological survey in Washington boasts one of the biggest cameras in the world. It was specially designed by experts of the survey bureau, and is used for reproducing maps of which thousands of copies are required. It weighs three and a half tons, being made almost wholly of steel to insure rigidity. The focal length of its lens is 42 inches, and it can take a picture three feet square. The frame is suspended by springs to absorb vibrations. It is operated altogether by electricity. The big plateholder is a built-in part of the dark room. With this instrument exceptionally fine reproductions of maps can be made, because guesswork is eliminated and the numerous accidents which may spoil results where ordinary cameras are used are made practically impossible.

Good Friday.

The vicar of Blackburn, England, protested in the local press against a Good Friday football match between the town's leading team and Glasgow, saying the day should not be used for amusement. But perversely enough practically all over Europe Good Friday is regarded as a day for holiday merriment. In Rome shops are generally open all day. Monaco is celebrated for its Good Friday mystery play. Of recent years in England the day has been marked by great outdoor religious processions. During the last year of the war, when the Germans were breaking our Fifth army, all the Protestant bodies united in a Good Friday outdoor procession and service. It was directed by the bishop of London, who yielded the principal place to the Salvation army.—London Mail.

Author of "My Old Kentucky Home."

"My Old Kentucky Home" was considered the masterpiece of Stephen Collins Foster. It was composed and sung for the first time at the homestead of Judge John Rowan, a representative in congress, a few miles east of Bardstown, Ky. Foster was a native of Pennsylvania, born at Lawrenceville (now a part of Pittsburgh), July 4, 1826, of Scotch-Irish descent. Mr. Foster was on a visit at the Rowan home when he wrote the song. Other popular songs that he wrote were "Old Folks At Home," "Gentle Annie," "Oh, Susanna," "Old Dog Tray," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground" and "Old Black Joe." His sister was a gifted musician. She was married to Rev. Edward Yeates Buchanan, the only brother of President Buchanan. Stephen Foster died in Pittsburgh January 13, 1864.

Who Dare to Be Judges?

In Montreal a few years ago a man left his dog in the care of the church he attended and to which he left his money. But Germany is the country for quaint charities. In the little town of Hoschmann there is a bequest that provides prizes for the men who marry the ugliest, the most crippled, and the women over forty who have been jilted at least twice. The awards are made every year. The ugliest woman gets a dowry of $90; the most crippled $60, and the woman over forty $50 The trustees have the power to increase the amount in the case of any man who marries a more than usually ugly woman. This strange charity is the result of a wealthy man's discovery of the great power of beauty. He wishes to help those women who are without it.

GOING IN FOR ARCHEOLOGY

Whole World Seems to Have Made Up Its Mind to Take a Hand at the Game.

Interest in archeology everywhere has apparently been stirred up by the unparalleled fame of the Tut-Ankh-Amen discoveries. They're digging at Ur and in Yucatan; in the deserts of Gobi and the cliffs of the Ozarks; among the Zuni ruins, and the Inca remains.

No prehistoric cemetery or temple rests untouched. Even old corner stones of A. D. times acquire a new interest and inspire curiosity.

All the present world being explored, the North pole found and David Livingstone's Darkest Africa griddled with railroads, nothing is left but the hoary past and the planets.

They are looking for the grave of Abraham at this moment, and relics of the ark might be revealed by running a drift into the washed-down detritus of Mount Ararat.

Archeology has gathered together all the rusty spoons and buckles on Jamestown island and put them in a handsome glass case to provoke the emotions and the ruminations of high-brow visitors.

For after all, one has to think hard and somewhat passionately to be stirred by the sight of an archeological collection. By seeing what those men of legend and historical fact wore and grasped by the hand, we seek to bring ourselves to feel what they thought and were. Why we should care is a part of the mystery of psychology.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Electricity From the Air.

Joseph Dezsoffy, a young Hungarian engineer, he is only twenty-two years old, is reported to have invented an apparatus for extracting electric current from the air without the least expense. The chief feature of his device is a mast similar to those which are used for wireless telegraphy, and the electric energy gained from the air varies according to the height of the mast. He claims that he would be able to reach 40,000 volts at an altitude of 900 feet. The inventor has fitted several houses with his apparatus, supplying electric current for their lighting. It has been observed that the current is strongest at noon and weakest at about midnight.

BIRDS TRAVEL FAR AND FAST

Some Peculiarities of Their Migrations Have Never Been Understood, or at Least Explained.

The fastest travelers in the world are arriving in Britain just now.

Few people have any idea of the speed with which the migrant birds get here from Africa by taking the upper air-lanes, where the air is much thinner and very high speeds are possible.

Gatke considered that the little Arctic blue-throat (one of the warblers, no bigger than a robin) left Africa at dusk and reached Heligoland nine hours later.

It thus flies 1,600 miles in one prodigious span at 180 miles an hour. The swallow easily manages 100 miles an hour, and the swift 150.

One of the chief reasons for these migrants knowing where they are going is the fact that in clear air at a height of from one to five miles they have a bold map outlined below them.

They see France before they leave Africa. While still over Holland they see Sweden. An altitude of five miles gives a man a view for 225 miles—and a bird's vision is even more acute.

Bird migration offers a wonderful field for research. One of the mysteries to be solved is why storks, coming north from their winter in India and South Africa, ignore Britain and settle to nest in Germany, Holland, and Denmark.—London Tit-Bits.

IRRIGATION SCHEME IS BIG

But If Carried Out It Will Restore Fertility to the Great Plain of Jordan.

The Dead sea will soon come to life and the land which in Joshua's time "flowed with milk and honey" is to come into its own again, according to Albert Hiorth, outlining a scheme for the irrigation of the plain of Jordan between the Lake of Genesareth and the Dead sea, to the members of the Victoria institute in London. Wide areas, he said, were covered with fertile soil suitable for cultivation, and irrigation was only needed in those districts. The irrigation scheme proposed was to build canals on both sides of the River Jordan and parallel with it. Throughout their length the canals would be furnished with suitable outlets for the distribution of water over the plains sloping toward the Jordan. As a source of energy, there is planned a hydro-electric plant on the western shore of the Dead sea, which would receive its energy from the Mediterranean through a tunnel under Jerusalem. The scheme, added the lecturer, was far from new—it was probably 2,000 to 3,000 years old, but its realization had neither been demanded nor had it been feasible until now.

New Bird Reservation.

A 40-acre tract adjoining the elk refuge near Jackson, Wyo., has been established as a new national bird reservation by executive order. It will be known as the Flat Creek reservation, and will serve throughout the year as a breeding and resting place for the wild fowl and other birds of the region. Late in fall and in winter it will serve another purpose in affording additional pasturage to the elk herds coming down from the mountains in and about the Yellowstone national park to winter in the Jackson Hole region. Both the elk refuge and the Flat Creek reservation are under the jurisdiction of the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Smallest Book in the World.

The smallest book in the world, so far as is known, is preserved in an out-of-the-way corner of the British museum. This miniature volume is not so wide as a man's thumb; but despite its microscopical dimensions it is most beautifully finished, and is a wonderful specimen of the printer's art.

It consists of no less than 100 pages of extremely thin paper, and the engravings are highly creditable pieces of work, and are printed in colors. The exact size of the book, taking the measurements of the outside covers, is ¾ by ½ inch. It bears the date 1839, and is therefore eighty-four years old. The title of this curiosity is "Schlorr's English Bijou Almanac."

COLONIALS START LONG GRIND TODAY

The first of the Colonials' series of twelve games in as many days will be played at the Fair Grounds tonight at 6:15 when they line up against the Mayfield Tigers from the northern part of the state. Recently this club defeated the Utica K of C. by a 4-3 score. It is altogether likely that Ralph Perry, the high school coach, will receive the mound assignment this afternoon for the local team.

Thursday the Colonials travel to Red Hook where they will meet the Red Hook Regulars in a twilight game which will start at 6:15, daylight saving time. Freddie Rossback will oppose the local team on the mound. Forsythe will very likely pitch for the locals.

Friday the local club will play the Astors in Rhinebeck at 6 o'clock, daylight saving time. On Saturday and Sunday the McConnell Giants will come to this city to furnish the opposition.

MUST BEAT YANKS, SAYS SPEAKER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 13.—"Connie Mack's Athletics are dangerous but the Yanks are the team that American League clubs will have to beat."

Tris Speaker, manager and centerfielder nonpareil of the Cleveland Indians, made this statement in an interview today. His team has just finished a four game series with the Yankees in which Cleveland won three.

Speaker said he thinks his club is as good as any in the league, but he is making no pennant predictions at this early date. Speaking of the Yanks, he said:

"Just at present they are in a slump. I believe this may be in a measure attributed to the absence of Catcher Schang. I can't see a weak spot in the team."

The phenomenal showing of the Athletics Speaker placed to the credit of Mack's pitchers and, in a big measure, to Mack himself. The team is practically the same that was in field last year, Speaker, said, but the pitchers have "come through."

Speaker spiked published reports that he orders his pitchers to consistently pass Babe Ruth. He spoke specifically of last Monday's game when Ruth was passed four times.

"In that game I ordered only one intentional pass" he said. "We all realize Ruth is a great hitter and there are times when it wouldn't be good judgment to pitch to him."

Speaker expressed pleasure at the form his club has displayed so far this season. His men have been hitting hard and his pitchers, he said, have been going "pretty well."

K. H. S. BLANKS ALBANY AT TENNIS

The Kingston High School tennis team made a clean sweep of their match with Albany High School, played Tuesday evening on the courts at Forsyth Park, winning out by a score of 7-0. For the first time this season, Kingston won out in all singles matches. They were back in form for team work also, and both the doubles went to the locals. The teams were fairly well matched, and some of the scores were very close. Hogle, the captain of the Albany team, was about the fastest and surest of the visitors, giving the captain of the locals, MacFadden, a close run. The play was fast in most of the matches, and exceedingly so in the doubles match between Hogle and Knox, of Albany, and Stelle and MacFadden, of Kingston. Good form, speed and good judgment were in prominence throughout the match, with the locals outguessing the visitors.

In the singles:

MacFadden won out, after a hard contest, against Hogle, 7-9, 8-10, 6-4. Hogle's drive and MacFadden's overhead smash made considerable trouble for each other, but Mac worked his favorite a little more than the Albany man could get over one of his and the match was scored for Maroon and White.

Stelle won against Knox 6-2, 6-2. Stelle's net work and good directing of shots proved too much for the Albany player to overcome.

Merine took two deuce sets from Parkhurst, 7-5, 7-5. Both players showed up well, with Merine on the better side of the decision.

Herzog and Mills each won one set, then Herzog blanked his opponent by clever placing and fast work around the court, taking the last set and the match. The games were, in favor of the Kingston players, 3-6, 2-6, 6-0.

Herzog and Clayton took a somewhat drawn-out match from Mills and Parkhurst, taking the necessary two-point lead in a deuce set at the end that gave them the match. The scores were: 2-6, 6-4, 7-5. The last set was particularly good, the Kingston men overcoming a 2-0 lead their opponents had on them.

The fastest set was doubles played by Hogle and Knox against MacFadden and Stelle. It was here that Kingston really showed up wonderfully. MacFadden's serve, his steady back-court work, his swift return and hard overhead smash, together with Stelle's remarkable work proved a little too much for the Albany stars. The Albany men did their best and showed the real stuff, but the team-trained locals scored over them 6-3, 6-4.

TAGGING ALL THE BASES IN THE MAJOR LEAGUES

Ruth hit a homer and a single in his first two times at bat, but when the Cleveland pitchers walked him in his next two times at bat, the Indians were able to beat the Yanks, 8 to 4.

"Rabbit" Maranville laced out three hits against the Giants, all of which counted in the scoring and Pittsburgh took the odd game of the series from New York 4 to 2.

"Hack" Miller's pair of homers, one with the bases loaded, enabled Chicago to beat Boston in a free hitting game, 12 to 11.

St. Louis made only four hits against Washington but three of them were of the extra base variety which brought about the defeat of the Senators, 3 to 1.

Brooklyn fell into a tie with Cincinnati for third place when St. Louis beat them 5 to 4, a ninth inning error by Johnston and a single by Toporcer producing the winning tally.

The American League cellar title changed hands, Chicago moving into last place when Boston slugged a 10 to 4 win.

A sixth inning uprising, started with a single by Heirmach, a pinch hitter, produced 4 runs, enough to allow Philadelphia to beat Detroit, 7 to 3.

ATLANTIC LEAGUE FALLS TO PIECES

After a good many fruitless attempts to get cities in this vicinity to take franchises in the Atlantic league the remaining members have finally decided to disband. The league was far from a success financially. Some of the clubs will play independent baseball. Among these are the Middletown Cubans who are endeavoring to arrange a series of games with the semi-pro teams in this vicinity. There is a possibility that Schatz will want to cancel his game with the Colonials next Thursday because of the firemen's parade in Beacon. If such action is taken by the Poughkeepsie owner the Cubans will be brought to this city. In any case a series will be arranged later in the season with this strong club.

DEMPSEY IS NOT COCKSURE

By Ed. W. Smith.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Great Falls, Montana, June 13.—"It may be a great surprise to the world but the thing I would like most to do would be to hit him on the chin on July 4 and knock him into the same sort of a fit that I knocked Carpentier. Whether I can do it or not is a sort of question that I can't answer."

That was the very frank statement made to me by Jack Dempsey. He amplified the statement a little as his copper colored face lighted up with the excitement of the situation and what he had to say.

"I am not so extremely confident that I will be able to whip Mr. Gibbons in a round or so and I would rather not have any of the betting men who are so sure of me to place their money that way. Now I have heard a lot of them say that I am not fit and ready, that he is and that this is the time I am going to get mine.

"Of course I do not think so, but at the same time this is going to be a whale of a battle. I really believe Gibbons probably will be a leader up to the time I put over the winning punch. But he is not going to be an easy man to hit by any means."

Dempsey is not of good color at the present time. They say you become colored a sort of yellow in the highlands of this section. Dempsey surely is coppered to the limit. His nose is red as a beet and while his color is healthy enough it is of the copper of this section.
